

EDAC Practice Test Questions and Answers

1. In EBD, 'translational research' refers to:

- A) Applying laboratory or academic research findings to real-world design practice
- B) Translating studies from foreign languages for US practice
- C) Converting qualitative findings into quantitative metrics
- D) Moving research data from paper records to digital systems

2. In EBD, a 'benchmark' is best described as:

- A) A reference point from existing research or high-performing facilities against which design outcomes are compared
- B) A physical marking on a construction site indicating elevation
- C) A minimum code requirement for healthcare facility square footage
- D) A standard specification for healthcare-grade building materials

3. In EBD, standardized room design refers to:

- A) Identical room layouts across a unit to reduce staff errors from unfamiliar environments
- B) Using the same brand of furniture across all rooms
- C) Applying a single design template across all hospital departments
- D) Meeting minimum code requirements uniformly in every room

4. In EBD, 'patient-controlled environments' refer to:

- A) Systems that let patients adjust lighting, temperature, and entertainment from the bedside
- B) Facilities where patients self-manage their treatment plans
- C) Rooms in which patients can lock doors for privacy at will
- D) Clinical protocols developed with patient input

Answers: 1-A 2-A 3-A 4-A

For More EDAC Questions and Answers FREE, EDAC Online Prep Training, EDAC Exam, EDAC Study Guide, EDAC Flashcards, EDAC Quizzes visit:

EDAC Practice Test